Leza Coleman, California Commission on Aging

Leza Coleman, the Executive Director for California Long-Term Care Ombudsman Association (CLTCOA), was introduced to the world of elder justice and self-determination as a volunteer Long-Term Care Ombudsman, where she honed her advocacy skills supporting residents and their families in achieving the highest levels of care. Inspired to ensure dignity and respect for all residents, Leza obtained her administrator's license and joined the leadership team to open an assisted living facility committed to person centered models of care. Not satisfied to serve seniors in a single community Leza took on the leadership of CLTCOA in 2012, where she supports, resources, and magnifies the work of the thirty-five local LTC Ombudsman programs in California. She now serves as a board member for the California Elder Justice Coalition, the Village Movement California, California Health Advocates, as well as on the policy committee for the California Association for Long-Term Care Medicine and the California Aging and Disability Alliance. Leza has been active in multiple statewide legislative efforts and is passionate about working on statewide efforts to promote "aging well" in California.

Lisa Nerenberg, California Elder Justice Coalition

Lisa Nerenberg has been a leader in the field of elder abuse prevention for over 35 years. She is currently the Executive Director of the California Elder Justice Coalition and an instructor at City College of San Francisco, where she teaches classes in gerontology, elder abuse, and ageism. She was the founding director of the San Francisco Consortium for Elder Abuse Prevention, which piloted the nation's first elder abuse multidisciplinary team and other widely replicated services. She has presented at hundreds of professional forums, testified before

Congressional committees, served on governmental advisory boards, and written extensively about elder abuse, undue influence, elder justice, public health approaches to combating elder abuse and health disparities, and related topics.

Her recent book “Elder Justice, Ageism and Elder Abuse” offers a framework for promoting individual rights and social justice in aging policy and programs. Her earlier work “Elder Abuse Prevention: Emerging Trends and Promising Strategies” describes what the public, government, agencies, and advocates can do to prevent abuse, treat its effects, and ensure justice. Lisa received Masters’ degrees in Social Work and Public Health from the University of Minnesota.

Liz Logsdon, Disability Rights California

Elizabeth (Liz) Logsdon is the Managing Attorney of the Investigations Unit at Disability Rights California (DRC). DRC's Investigations Unit addresses the abuse and neglect of people with disabilities in all settings, including long term care facilities, state hospitals, developmental centers, community-based settings, jails, and immigration detention facilities. The Investigations Unit pursues non-litigation systemic advocacy solutions with a focus on public policy. Liz joined DRC in July 2018 after working for Disability Rights Tennessee, the Tennessee P&A, for over five years.

Liz obtained her law degree from Vanderbilt University Law School in 2011 and holds a bachelor’s degree from the University of Central Florida. Liz lives in Los Angeles.

Marty Omoto, CA Disability Action Network

Marty’s goal is to improve the quality of life by protecting and strengthening services and supports for people, including those who are developmentally disabled, have mental health needs (with traumatic brain and other injuries), veterans with disabilities, seniors, physically disabled individuals, family members, workers, community organizations including the Asian-Pacific Islander, Latino and African American communities, and others across California. Marty’s publication, California Disability Community Action Network (CDCAN) Disability Rights News, initiated in 1987, is now distributed electronically to over 65,000 people with announcements and reports on hearings and legislative sessions.

Marty’s life and passion for social justice have been deeply influenced by his family, his Japanese American ethnicity, and providing care for his developmentally disabled sister for over twenty years. Growing up during the internment of Japanese Americans during the war and, later, amidst the California farm workers’ movement in the grape fields of Salinas, Marty experienced, first-hand, the importance of issues for which he advocates: fairness, justice, access, and the opportunity to improve one’s quality of life.
